Welcome to Responding to Grief:

In 1995 a publisher in the health care field asked me what I thought we needed to be doing in pastoral care, spiritual work and bereavement care. Obviously I was concerned with waking up religious leaders and religious communities to the presence of griever in their midst and healthier ways to be present with them on their journey.

Bridge building became our motto, and then our mission. There are so many wonderful printed and recorded resources, professional organizations, agencies, support services and individuals doing very noble and dedicated work in these areas. We didn't need to replace what they are doing or compete with it. Our goals emerged around these areas:

1. Lending support programmatically and with the unique gifts brought by a chaplain;
2. To keep all of these programs in front of us so that people can get help;
3. Bringing resource information to the people who need it;
4. Providing crisis support to people working in these fields
5. Offering programs on a variety of topics, especially those which recognize the place for spiritual care and concerns.

We now have over 1500 individuals, organizations and programs from four countries in our resource network. All of the resources are sent by email and are free. This includes this annual supplement, resource announcements, resource reviews, articles, conference news and 27 regularly updated bibliographies. We have presented throughout the United States and internationally. We have worked with budding authors and students to help where we can and to connect them to others.

In the midst of this came Responding to grief. It began in 1997 with over 50 subject areas and 1000 titles. It now has been expanded to many areas beyond bereavement, with the 2005 supplement numbering nearly 90 pages. We have a huge directory of publishers and agencies, have doubled the website listings and have included other reference material.

Keep in mind that the annual supplement represents only those items that came to our attention in 2005. If we have missed something get in touch with us. All of the supplements are available to you at no cost, via email. We are happy to receive new materials, offer reviews, cover quotes and blind reviews. Bringing people together. That is what bridging is all about.
